"Housework for Men" a Woman's Hint To Sterner Sex for a Lucrative Career, Solving a Social-Business Problem

By Nixola Greeley-Smith.

"No woman, if she can help it, should compete with men in work for which a man-made civilization has adapted him alone until she has reached the age of thirty-five or forty. But every girl of every class should be trained in some congenial occupation during her plastic years."

These words, from Gertrude Atherton, foremose among story tellers who write in English, launch a fresh solution of the newest and most difficult conundrum of the workshops-woman's place in them and her determination to compete there on equal terms with men-In her latest book, "The Living Present," a magnificently interesting theory that every woman should be trained for work, but that no woman should be compelled to work during the years sented to Secretary Lansing July 4, an- when she should be fulfilling her primal duty-the bearing and rearing

Ten Militants Seared Stiff by Rate

WASHINGTON, July 9 .- Rats, not imprisonment, was the painful feature of the three days' confinement of ten members of the National Woman's Party in the District Jail.

The pickets were released yesterday, and immediately went to a "martyrdom breakfast" at Suffrage headquarters, where $1.000 was raised to replenish the war chest. Mrs.

Helena Hill Weed told of the experience in jail as follows:

"We had all been shut in the cells with the lights out," she stated. "I heard a most awful scream from the third tier. I was down on the first tier, but several of our comrades were on the third. What do you think followed? Lucy Burns shricked, 'Rat! Bring me a light!

"What the Judge had falled to do, what the prosecuting attorney had falled to do, the rats had done. We were all of us scared stiff. Our whole section was infested with rats as big as puppy dogs. Miss Burns moved as puppy dogs. Miss Burns moved out of her cell and refused to go to bed until she had a light." It is said that preparations are now being made for another demonstra-tion in front of the White House,

The child, a Boy Scout, was camping with other lads in the woods near the lake. He and his seven-year-old brother, George, went out in the skiff. When the boat began to fill, it is thought the elder became excited and went over. He did not reappear.

The younger brother yelled for help. Several boys awam out. After diving vainly for the body for some time they got a pole with a hook with which they got the lad's body to shore.
